D: Essays:

Please imagine that you are celebrating your 60th birthday together in the company of your partner, your family and your friends. The atmosphere is very friendly, suddenly your granddaughter jumps on your lap and ask you the following question: "Grandfather/ Grandmother, what have you done in your life?"

Please describe shortly what you WOULD LIKE to answer:

"I have been a neurosurgeon for fifteen years. In the fifteen years, I have started five hospitals and two homes for those who are mentally ill and all are doing well. After the fifteen years in medicine, I made up my mind to quit that profession which I really enjoyed. I ventured into politics. The main reason was that I wanted very much to be a leader. I yearned to serve and save people facing tough challenges in life. I wanted to be in a position to stand for them. I vied for the parliamentary seat and managed to secure a place in parliament though I was a newcomer. This was mainly because the people had seen my services as a doctor and they believed in me. I did a lot as a member of parliament and the people were always the witnesses for all the changes I enacted. Later, due to being very much ambitious, I decided to vie for the presidency which I got and all was because of the trust and belief people had in me. During my tenure, Kenya has been able to achieve the vision 2030 that seemed impossible. I believe that what I have achieved together with Kenyans is what most of them were dreaming of. I have since retired from politics and now I run charity organisations to sponsor students who cannot manage to pay their school fees.
